Creating subject bulletins (newsletters) in KnowledgeShare

Did you know? As well as providing personalised updates, you can draw on categorised resources in KnowledgeShare to create a bulletin or newsletter.

The newsletter function allows resources to be added to a one-off or regular bulletin using resource categories. For each newsletter you create section headings by applying selection criteria. You can choose different categories for each section and relevant resources will be included.

The finished newsletter is downloaded from KnowledgeShare as a Word document and formatted according to your needs, then optionally sent to recipients via the system.

For more details see the KS Web Handbook – Updates - 3.5 Newsletters

Category update

We have reviewed and updated the Breastfeeding category so that it clearly encompasses other methods of infant feeding, such as formula feeding and supplementary feeding. This has now been renamed Infant Feeding and can still be found under the Individual Behaviour parent heading:

We have also added a reminder about the category Infant Feeding to the Normal Pregnancy and Labour category so that those who have a professional interest in the different types of infant feeding, such as mid-wives, will not miss out on related resources.
